European Discovery & the Colonization of Australia
Before the Europeans

- The Solo Man & Visitors from PNG
- Admiral Cheng Ho of the Ming Dynasty: the earliest explorers
- After the end of the 19th C, the Macassans from South Sulawesi arriving at the Arnhem Land and Kimberley for the sea slug trepang. These visits were finally stopped in 1907 because of their threat to English pearling interests.
The Earlier European Explorers

In 1606

- Duyfken, captained by Willem Janszoon, to search for “gold & riches" somewhere in the Spice Islands region. Leaving from Banda (Indonesia) & reaching the Cape York Peninsula and charting some 320 km of the coastline, which he thought to be a southerly extension of New Guinea (an island off the coast of New Guinea) to be named “Nieu Zelandt”
1607
Luis Vaez de Torres, Spanish navigator sailing with Pedro Fernandez de Quiros in search of Terra Australis Incognita, the mythical "great south land," and claiming it for Spain and the Church.

1616
Dirk Hartog, the first European to have landed on the western coast of Australia.

1642
Abel Janszoon Tasman, Dutch navigator, discoverer Tasmania (which he named Van Diemen's Land after Anthony van Diemen, Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, called the north, west and south coast of Australia New Holland.)
1688
William Dampier, English navigator, explorer, writer & pirate landing in the north-western Australia

1770
James Cook, arriving at Botany Bay, naming the eastern part New South Wales & presenting it as the Crown land to King George III of England
The First British Establishment of Colony

1788

Captain Arthur Phillip, (the 1st Governor of NSW from 1788 – 1792): Leaving England on 13th May 1787

The First Fleet, between 18 & 20 Jan. 1788

9 ships & 2 Naval vessels ("Syrius" and "Supply") with about 1,350 people (759 convicts, & their Marine guards, some with families, and a few civil officers, now acknowledged as the Founders of Aust.) arriving at Botany Bay
48 convicts & crew died during the voyage.

Moving north at Camp Cove, Port Jackson on 26 Jan. 1788 (later known as Australia Day) to establish the first penal colony.

The Second Fleet (known as the ‘Death Fleet’), 3 June, 1790 the "Lady Juliana", the first of the ships with 225 female convicts sighted & on 20 June followed on 20th June by the "Justinian", 278 convicts & crew died.
Law and Land in NSW

- 1788—1823 † NSW was a penal colony, although free settlers starting to arrive in 1793

- 1823, a NSW parliament established by setting up a Legislative Council & a Supreme Court (seen with the establishment of NSW criminal and civil courts but land ownership by the indigenous people was only dealt in the mid—1830s)
1861, the free selection of Crown land in NSW: any person permitting to select up to 320 acres on the condition of paying a deposit & living on the land for three years but Abs were limited to use the Crown lands except pastoral lands. Effects: conflicts between squatters & the selectors, encouraging bushranging
